COLLEGE GLEE CLUB TOURS VERMONT

Combination of Glee and Mandolin Clubs Proves Very Effective.

After a long season of preparation and careful training, the combined musical organizations of the men's college made an extended trip into southern Vermont which proved to be more successful than was anticipated. Four entertainments were given on successive evenings starting at Ludlow on the 20th of February and from there to Springfield, Westminster, and Bellows Falls on the 23rd. The thirty-six members were entertained in pairs at the various places and they were very much gratified at the cordial reception which they received everywhere.

The friends of the college and especially those who are interested in the progress of the musical activities here may look upon this trip as a distinct achievement since it is the first in the history of the institution. The entire program was planned and arranged by Manager Reynolds who gave himself enthusiastically to the work. It is generally conceded that the success of the club is due to the inspiration and untiring efforts of Prof. Cunningham, who, as director, has faithfully trained the club throughout the winter. A trip is planned to Brandon and Rutland in the near future, and it is hoped that a northern trip will be possible later on.

The success of the trip is best attested by the local report, which appeared in the Vermont Tribune of Feb. 22, of the entertainment given in Ludlow from which we quote in part.

"The Middlebury College Glee and Mandolin Club gave their usual fine concert at the Opera House Tuesday evening and were greeted by an enthusiastic and appreciative audience. The members of the club, numbering about 36, are on a trip through southern Vermont. The program presented Tuesday evening was varied and well balanced, all numbers winning merited applause. The chorus work was spirited and excellect enunciation was manifested. The double quartet with its exceptional talent produced the usual harmony which was much enjoyed by the audience. The Hawaiian melodies by the Mandolin Club were most pleasing. Especially fine were the solos by Miller '17 and Reynolds '17, the latter making a distinct hit in his 'College Boy' song, responding to several encores. Mr. Miller, in a very pleasing manner, beld his audience, whose appreciation was profusely shown. His solo with imitation banjo accompaniment was a delightful specialty. Much enjoyment was given by 'The Rambling Four,' as they cleverly handled their parts.

"The dexterous work of Meade '18 in a bit of mysticism with his magic wand, and his amusing chatter while doing it, were appreciated not only by the youngsters in the front rows, but also by the older portion of the audience. The program as a whole gave evidence of unusual instruction in music."

CLASSICAL SOCIETY HOLDS ANNUAL MEETING

Representatives Attend from High Schools and Colleges Over the State.

The eleventh annual meeting of the Vermont section of the Classical Association of New England was held at Middlebury on Friday, Feb. 23. There was an average attendance of teachers from the high schools and colleges of the state, but the session was attended with a great deal of interest, and problems vital to the teaching of the classics under modern conditions were discussed at length. The meeting was divided into two sessions, the first lasting from 10:30 to 12 a. m., and the second from 2 to 4 p. m.

Two papers were read at each session with a lively discussion following each. In the forenoon Miss Florence A. Allen of the Brattleboro High school opened the session with a paper on "Vivifying Latin." The subject is a very timely one and the discussion was most excellent. Miss Allen described at length her endeavors to make the Latin language a thing of vital interest to her students and to inspire in them a desire to know more about the Romans and their customs through their own efforts. By a process of trial and error she gradually built up a system for making Latin a living reality to them by showing the dependence of modern English on the Latin and working up Roman plays which present in a vivid reality the every-day life of the ancients. Several systems now in common use in the most up-to-date high schools she has employed most effectively, but her greatest success lies in the practical working out of her own inventions. She has established a Latin club in which the members take an active part in developing a knowledge of the language and also of the Roman contributions to modern civilization. Frequent meetings are held at which Roman games are played and games which are designed to fix declensions and words in the minds of the members. The officers of the club are Roman officials who perform as nearly as possible the functions of their prototypes. The above are only a few of the means by which Miss Allen inspires enthusiasm in her students.

The second paper, by Miss Laura E. Walbridge of the Pittsford High school on "The Thought Within the Text," dealt with the same fundamental problem of making the study of Latin of real interest and value to the student. She emphasized the importance of bringing out the thought of the text as opposed to an over emphasis of syntax and mere vocabulary drill. The methods which Miss Walbridge is employing in the classroom have proved to be successful.

In the afternoon session a paper was read by Mr. John J. Finnessy of the Northfield High school on "The Advantages and Disadvantages of a Young

ONE-SIDED SEASON FOR BASKETBALL

The Freshman Team Shows Better Form as Season Advances.

Last Wednesday evening the championship junior basketball team defeated the freshmen by the narrow margin of 13 to 10. In the first half the freshmen showed ragged form, allowing their opponents to score nine points to their two. Early in the second half the underclassmen began to fight hard for the game, and Satterlee shot three goals from the floor in rapid succession. As usual, Parker starred for the juniors and Heath for the freshmen, but they were well covered by their opponents at all times, and were not allowed to shoot for baskets very freely. Myrick was leading point getter, shooting four baskets for the winners.

The game between the seniors and the sophomores was quite uninteresting on account of its one-sidedness. The upperclassmen were very much weakened by the absence of Hollister, Lang, and Hard from the line-up and allowed the 1919 boys to play rings around them. For the winners, Tatro and Pollard showed first class form in passing the ball and getting baskets, each shooting six from the floor. In the second half Ruether was removed for rough playing and Darby took his place.

Line-up:

1918	1920
Good rf.	Ginsberg rf.
Parker lf.	Heath lf.
Myrick c.	Satterlee c.
Dake lg.	Moran lg.
Christian rg.	Courtney rg.

1919	1917
Tatro rf.	Bartlett rf.
Pollard lf.	Hubbard lg.
Morton c.	Esten c.
Towers lg.	Slade lg.
Ruether. Darby } rg.	Damon rg.

Goals from floor: Bartlett, Esten, Towers, Ruether, Morton 3; Tatro 6, Pollard 6. Goals from foul line: Hubbard 2.

The juniors are easily the champions of the college having won five straight victories without a single defeat.

The seniors and freshmen have each won two games and the sophomores one. It is more than likely that in the games this evening the juniors will keep up their winning streak and defeat the seniors. That practically leaves the race for second place to be fought out between the two lower classes. If the freshmen win, the second place will be theirs, but if the sophomores are victorious, a three-cornered tie for second place will result.

Sage Dance.

Wednesday evening, Feb. 21, the annual Sage dance was held in the McCullough Gymnasium. Prof. and Mrs. Voter, Prof. and Mrs. Bonney and Miss Eleanor Ross were patrons and patronesses.

MOUNTAIN TRAILS TO BE LAID OUT.

Outing Club Plans Extensive Trips Through Forest Lands During Spring Season.

In an article on the White Outdocrs and the part college outing clubs are taking in the development of winter sports by Lawrence Perry in Scribners magazine for March, an article of interest to Middlebury students because mention is made of the the Middlebury students' Outing Club and its work, the author says that winter, formerly dreaded by colleges in the northern climates, is now welcomed and its passing noted with sincere regret by the enthusiasts of ski and snowshoe.

But the departure of snow does not mark a cessation of activities in college outing clubs, and in the case of Middlebury it should be but the beginning of the real work of the club.

One of the important features of the Dartmouth club is its system of cabins within easy hiking range of the college campus, and forming connecting links with other cabins at greater distances. This idea of building cabins and shacks must be kept constantly to the fore in the plans of the Middlebury club. The club has had a successful winter but it has difficult yet definite work ahead of it. At present, of course, there are no available funds for cabin building, but the founders and backers of the club have faith that a means will be found eventually for their erection.

There are, however, abundant possibilities open to the club this spring. Permission has been readily granted to build cabins on the vast tract of Green Mountain lands owned by the college; no college is more ideally situated in this respect, and it is planned that the various hikes of the club members this spring shall be in the nature of scouting trips to discover suitable sites for the cabins that are to come and lay out definite trails to these spots. Few students are familiar with this region or realize the great extent of territory open to them, and the club members expect to have many interesting trips in opening up this area of Green Mountain land, most of which is virgin forest.

Attempt to Establish Reserve Corps.

The members of the military company have petitioned the president and faculty of the college to communicate with the War Department with a view to organizing a unit of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps in this college. If this were done, a regular army officer would be detailed as commandant, and those who desired it would receive a systematic course of instruction in military tactics. The college must guarantee that there will be at least 100 men taking such a course for at least two years. As over 100 men have already signed the petition, it is likely that such a system of military training will be introduced shortly.

EDITORIAL.

We are generally so absorbed in our busy round of college life that we fail to take account of the broader issues of the world at large. In the present world crisis, a definite recognition of our position towards it and the attitude which we are to assume in the event of our nation's going to war should be clearly and distinctly set forth.

We appeal to the serious thought of every man and woman in college, and let each search his own heart to find the real attitude which he is taking toward his own personal duty to his country. The great war is flying in the face of established ideas of justice and honor, and it may well fall to America to champion their cause in the sacrifice of precious material. As college men, our answer must be to the higher call of manhood nor can we quit ourselves by any half-way measures. Our first service is preparation, which consists largely in aligning our purposes and interests with those of our country and the subordination of ourselves to the greater welfare of humanity. If we do this in all earnestness, when a call comes we will not fail our country.

Office Hours.

In order that the college may take advantage of the large number of exchanges which the Campus receives from other institutions, regular office hours on Wednesday and Saturday afternoons are maintained, the hours being 3:45-4:45, and 1:30-3:00 respectively. It is hoped that the faculty and students will take advantage of this opportunity, for it is the only practical way in which we can offer to the public the news from other institutions, and it will have the added effect of arousing a more personal interest in the Campus itself. Communications or notices may be dropped in the letter box at any time, and such will receive the prompt attention of the board.

A Correction.

In the preceding issue of the Campus under the article entitled "Commencement Plans," a list of the Commencement speakers was announced. The name of Mr. Harold M. Davis should be substituted for that of Mr. William H. Edmunds. We wish to apologize for the blunder.

The Middlebury Song Book.

After considerable agitation on the part of certain individuals who are vitally interested in the work, the Union took definite action to secure the editing and publishing of the Middlebury Song Book. A committee of three was appointed to take charge of the work, consisting of A. Palmer Benedict '17, chairman, Fred P. Lang '17, and Lester N. Allyn, '18. The committee has taken hold of the work with vigor, and it is now its definite purpose to complete the book for Commencement.

This opportunity is taken to appeal directly to the alumni and individual members of the faculty and student body to make any contribution by way of music, words, or general suggestions in the makeup of the book which they may see fit. The committee has undertaken to provide suitable words for any music which may be submitted, or music for any lyrical compositions. It is impossible for its members to do the work creditably entirely unaided, and every encouragement which they receive will make the success of their efforts more certain.

The lateness of the season demands quick action on the part of the committee, and if you purpose contributing anything, it should be done immediately in order to insure time for the proper arrangement and selection of the material which promises to be no small task. All communications should be addressed to Mr. Benedict.

The Conference at Wheaton.

"I have never before attended a conference from which I have received so much inspiration for myself and my girls." So said Dean Voight of the University of Ohio, referring to the Conference on Vocational Opportunities for College Women, held at Wheaton College on February 27 and 28. Among the speakers, who were all excellent, were the following: Meyer Bloomfield, Director of Vocation Bureau, Boston; Owen L. Lovejoy, General Secretary of the National Child Labor Committee; Miss Hilda Mulhauser, Employment Expert of the United States Department of Labor; Miss Frances Cummings, Manager of the Intercollegiate Bureau of Occupations, New York City; Mrs. Lois Pierce Hughes, Manager of the Women's Floor and Social Hostess at Hotel McAlpin, New York City; Mrs. Roy E. Fletcher, Chairman of the Vocational Education and Guidance Committee, General Federation of Women's Clubs, New York City; Mrs. Prince, Director of the School of Salesmanship, Boston; and Mrs. Edna Rich Morse, President-Emeritus of the State Normal School of Manual Arts and Home Economics, Santa Barbara, Califorina. The latter said, "This program is the richest vocational program I have ever seen in print. The whole country will be talking about this wonderful Conference at Wheaton."

Delegates were present from the following colleges: University of Rochester, Connecticut College, Hunter College, Smith College, Wellesley College, Radcliffe College, Tufts College, University of Vermont, New Hampshire State College, Bates College, Elmira College, Ohio University, Boston University, Simmons College, Mount Holyoke College, Colby College and Middlebury College. Letters were read from several colleges unable to send delegates.

Four informal receptions were held that the delegates might meet the speakers. On Wednesday morning, February 28, a closed conference for delegates and cabinet was held, after which an open meeting took place. At this meeting each delegate told what her college was doing to "acquaint undergraduates with fields of occupation open to them after graduation".

Ruth A. Hesselgrave, the Middlebury delegate, will tell the girls about the Conference at the regular Y. W. C. A. meeting on Thursday, March 8.

Extended Plans for Summer Session.

Teachers of modern languages who have profited by previous study at Middlebury College summer sessions will welcome the announcement by the director, Professor Raymond McFarland, that a Spanish school will be established at Middlebury this summer. The Spanish school will be under the direction of Professor Julian Moreno-Lacalle, of the Department of Modern Languages at the United States Naval Academy, Annapolis, Maryland, who will be assisted by Professor Jose Martel, a colleague of Professor Lacalle's at the Annapolis Naval Academy. Spanish will be the language of the school. Students of Spanish will be housed in the Women's halls of the College and separate tables will be provided for them in the large dining hall. The aim of the Spanish school will be to afford its patrons the same intensive, continuous contact with things Spanish that has proved so successful in the German and French schools in the past.

Professor Williamson de Visme, director of the Ecole du Chateau de Soisy, France, will again direct the French Summer school at Middlebury. Among Professor de Visme's assistants will be Paul Louis Jeanrenaud, co-director of the Ecole du Chateau de Soisy, Mlle. Terese C. Saunier, and Mlle. Yvonne de Saussure, the talented daughter of Baron T. de Saussure, of France.

The German school will be directed again by Dr. L. L. Stroebe of Vassar College assisted by a corps of native German teachers. The Modern Language schools at Middlebury have proved so popular in the past that it has been found necessary to limit the number of students both in the German and in the French Schools.

Vermont Poet Honored.

Arthur W. Peach, professor of English in Norwich University, has been elected to membership in The Poetry Society of America, Inc. Membership is by invitation, and only writers who have written verse of recognized merit for standard magazines are eligible. In a recent address, Mr. Harold Rugg, assistant librarian of Dartmouth College, named Professor Peach as one of three Vermonters now writing "verse of merit."

Undergraduate Days.

"History repeats itself" (cf. Prof. Sanford's Course in Roman Origins). Like the Romans, we have the problem of the high cost of living. It is therefore interesting to note that the students of twenty-five years ago felt that they had solved this question. In a copy of the "Undergraduate" for 1891 we find the following: "The great cost of board, so discouraging to students of moderate means, has been eliminated by the establishment of a boarding hall where board is furnished at the price of the raw material."

The college hasn't changed so much after all, for we find the statement, "Many new text-books have been introduced this term."

"The man who takes care of the lamps in Starr Hall deserves credit for his ingenuity. He was bothered by students who were short of oil taking the hall lamps into their rooms and leaving the hall in perfect darkness. First, he wired the lamps to the bracket, but that did not mend matters, as the lamp and bracket were both taken away. Now he has wired them both to the building and has accomplished his object." What a fine idea it would be if some one should invent a means of fastening electric light bulbs to their sockets.

Dues weren't always promptly paid, either, for "The treasurer of the athletic association desires us to call the attention of the students to the fact that their dues to the association must be paid on or before the first day of March."

Another issue says: "It is interesting to notice how the students of this college make use of the reading room. They may be divided into three classes in this respect: first, those who spend a certain time each day in the room and who make themselves well acquainted with the doings of the world; second, those who go in occasionally and who have a sort of a dim knowledge of affairs; third, those who spend their time reading the jokes in the comic papers whenever they venture inside of the room." Do we not find the same three classes of students in college to-day?

Lecture on "Food Selection."

A lecture of especial interest to the Home Economics Department was given in the Hemicycle, Monday evening, February 26. Dr. C. F. Langworthy, chief of the Bureau of Chemistry of the United States Department of Agriculture and an expert in charge of Nutrition Investigation, gave a talk on "Food Selection" which was clearly illustrated by lantern slides. Dr. Langworthy is a graduate of Middlebury of the class of 1887, and was a senior at the time Pres. Thomas was enrolled as a freshman. A representative number of the student body and faculty attended the meeting. Some of the old-time theories which have been diet bug-bears for years were exploded by Dr. Langworthy's scientific exposition of the facts.

In closing, Dr. Langworthy spoke of the growing importance of the field of Home Economics. The Smith-Lever Act provides a large number of good positions in extension work, and the field is steadily growing larger.

ALUMNI NOTES

Announcement has been received of the marriage in Boston on February 18, of Miss Pauline Helms '15 to Mr. Howard Knight, a graduate of Columbia University. Both have recently graduated from the New York School of Philanthrophy.

'05. Born, January 21, to Ernest L. and Jeffries Leete Elliott, a son, at Claremont, N. H.

'05. On January 17, Miss Helen H. Fielden sailed from San Francisco on the steamer Siberia Maru to resume her work as missionary in China.

'99. Miss Annetta Anderson Smith represented Middlebury College at the 50th anniversary of Howard University, Washington, D. C., March 1-4.

The Springfield Alumni Association will hold a banquet at Springfield on March 23. Russell P. Dale '11 is president of the Association and has the matter in hand. President Thomas will be one of the speakers.

COLLEGE NOTES.

Last week the Sages, an undergraduate society, pledged the following men: Harry Jenne, Howard Watson, Donald Belden, Walter Anderson, Frederick Jones, and Roland Holbrook. Banquet and initiation of these new members will be held in a few days.

Mr. King, President Thomas' assistant, has returned from a three weeks' business trip to Boston where he has been rounding up students for the next year's entering class.

A. Palmer Benedict '17 attended the Chi Psi convention in Boston, Saturday, February 24.

Miss Ruth Hesselgrave '18 attended a Y. W. C. A. convention at Wheaton college, Norton, Mass.

Saturday evening, February 24 there was an informal dance in McCullough Gymnasium.

Miss Grace Foster of Walpole, N. H., spent the week-end with her sister, Miss Madalene Foster '17.

Marguerite Dyer '19 has succeeded Mrs. Edgar J. Wiley as organist at the Memorial Baptist church.

Mrs. A. A. Baldwin of Milford, Conn., was the week-end guest of her daughter, Miss Ruth Baldwin '20.

February 22.

Washington's birthday was celebrated in "fitting style" by the organization of various sleighing parties during the day. Nine of the Delta Kappa Epsilon men drove to the Brandon Inn under the chaperonage of Professor and Mrs. Bonney. An early start was made and the return trip was in the evening.

Home Economics Sale.

Every morning after chapel the Home Economics Department offers sandwiches for sale at the book store. It is needless to say that the sandwiches take well for it has been aptly put, "they often serve as an emergency breakfast for those who DIDN'T hear that rising bell." The department also sells "eats" of all kinds every afternoon after three-thirty at the Home Economics rooms.

The proceeds realized are to be used to procure as a lecturer, Miss Ravenhill, an expert on foods.

CLASSICAL SOCIETY MEET

Classical Teacher". As this is Mr. Finnessy's first year in the field of teaching, many helpful suggestions were derived from his discussion and the problems of the young teacher were clearly illustrated. The last paper was read by Mr. Richard H. Buffum of the junior class on "The Undergraduate and the Classics," in which he presented some of the problems of the student and prospective teacher of the classics.

A lively discussion followed each paper and much new light and many helpful suggestions were gained through the interchange of ideas. Many of the college students attended the sessions. Next year's meeting will be held at the University of Vermont at Burlington.

Civics Club.

An open meeting of the Civics Club was held on February 20, at which Miss Carrie Ormsbee spoke on her experience as a settlement worker in the slums of New York. She spoke of the existing conditions there and the lives of the people who live in "the most densely populated section of the world." She pointed out the opportunity there is for studying social conditions, where every nationality is represented. She then outlined the work that is being done to better these conditions, mentioning the club work, and the school of philanthropy. The work in the New York slum district represents a sunrise of a new day, she declares, and we may see international union as an end. There was a good attendance to hear Miss Ormsbee and all were very much interested in the problem she presented.

Prize Speaking Try-Outs.

The try-outs for the Parker prizes, which are to be awarded next Junior week to the two best speakers of the freshmen class in Middlebury College, were held Tuesday evening, February 27. The four competitors who proved to have the best qualifications as public speakers were: Philip D. Aines, Elbert T. Gallagher, Henry Thomas, and William Allen Huggard.

The members of the sophomore class who are to speak in a contest to be held among the many events in Junior week for the Merrill prizes are: Cecil Plumb, Leon McKinley Adkins, Seymour Leroy Hammond, Frederick Langdon Jones, and Ronald Jeremiah Darby.

The Parker prizes, twenty dollars and ten dollars, are awarded annually to the two best speakers in the freshman class, while four Merrill prizes of twenty-five dollars, twenty dollars, fifteen dollars, and ten dollars, are given to the four sophomores who show the greatest ability in speaking.

Vermont Chemists Meet.

A meeting of the Vermont section of the American Chemical Society was held in Burlington on February 23. Prof. Paul Gregory Baxter of Harvard University was the speaker of the evening upon the subject "Changes of Volume During Solution."

Those who attended from Middlebury College were: Prof. P. C. Voter, Mr. A. R. Davis, D. O. Mason '17, R. V. Ricker '17, H. L. Smith '19, L. N. Allyn '18, C. A. Danolds '17. They reported a valuable and interesting meeting.

Y. W. C. A. Election.

A regular meeting of Y. W. C. A. was held in the hemicycle on March 1. A good attendance encouraged our best workers to feel that perhaps our Y. W. C. A. will improve greatly in the coming meetings. The leader was Helen Clift. She read a selection from one of Margaret Slattery's books. After the regular meeting was over, a business meeting was held. The following officers were elected for the coming year:

President, Ruth Hesselgrave.
Vice-president, Marguerite Jones.
Treasurer, Margaret Shay.
Secretary, Mildred Hubbard.

Apollo Club.

Wednesday evening, February 28, there was an open meeting of the Apollo Club in the Latin room. About forty were present. Prof. Sanford gave a very interesting stereoptican lecture on "Ancient and Modern Warfare," emphasizing particularly the present situation. Not only the members of the club but the guests, also, wish to convey to Prof. Sanford their appreciation of his lecture. This is the first of the regular series of meetings of the Apollo Club, and it is hoped the interest will continue.

Phi Beta Kappa Elections.

The following members of the class of 1917 have been elected to the Phi Beta Kappa society: Helen Beulah Cussons, Madalene Katie Foster, Marguerite Elizabeth Heaphy, Winifred Lillie Jeffords, and Huldah May Thomas. They are to be congratulated on the consistent scholarship which secures for them this honor.
